

School of Hospitality & Tourism Management
Position Announcement: Clinical Professional Instructor
Date Available: August 2020

Principle Duties: Purdue University's School of Hospitality & Tourism Management (HTM) is seeking a Clinical Professional Instructor, with a broad background in restaurant management, beginning in August 2020. Applicants must be committed to excellence in teaching and restaurant operations. The duties performed by this individual include teaching management and leadership concepts, menu planning and marketing, and food production and service as part of instructing the students in the foodservice labs (HTM 29101 and HTM 49200) and the corresponding lectures. This person will also assist in planning, preparing, and serving meals at University, College, and Departmental special events. The individual selected will also be expected to advise student groups, serve on various committees, and participate in community engagement.

Qualifications: Applicants must have three to five years of meaningful management experience in foodservice with emphasis on restaurant operations. A bachelor's degree from an accredited university or culinary school is required; culinary educator certification and teaching experience is preferred.

The College: The School of HTM is an integral part of the College of Health and Human Sciences, with a Program ranked among the best in the United States. Purdue HTM is situated in the heart of the main campus in West Lafayette, Indiana. The University has more than 44,000 students and is located in a prosperous county of about 150,000 people. Purdue University is about 60 miles northwest of Indianapolis and 120 miles southeast of Chicago. Please access the following Web sites for more information:
