Position: Dean, Chapin School of Hospitality & Tourism Management

Florida International University's Chaplin School of Hospitality & Tourism Management is an internationally renowned hospitality program and one of FIU's strongest academic units. More than 2,000 undergraduate and graduate students from across the nation and around the globe choose the Chaplin School for its outstanding reputation, advantageous campus locations in Miami, expert faculty, rich curriculum and fast-track career opportunities in the international hotel, foodservice and tourism industries. In August 2006, FIU unveiled the first U.S. school of hospitality and tourism in Tianjin, China, and, today, the Marriott Tianjin China Program, ranked #1 in China, is FIU's largest international program, with a capacity for up to 1,000 students.

Reporting to the Provost of FIU and a key member of the University's leadership team, the next Dean of the Chaplin School will provide overall strategic vision and administrative leadership of the School, work to advance academic excellence and programmatic innovation, lead a talented and diverse community of faculty, staff and students, build connections both internally and externally, and lead the philanthropic activities to support resource development.

Candidates should have demonstrated executive leadership in the field of hospitality and tourism; the ability to think and act creatively, strategically, and tactically; success at developing both external and institutionally-strengthening relationships; and the enthusiasm for cultivating support from a range of potential funding sources. Continuing scholarly engagement in teaching or research is welcomed. The role is based in Miami, Florida.
