Position Title: Assistant Professor/Hotel, Restaurant & Tourism Management
Tenure-Track, 9-month position
College/Division: College of Agricultural, Consumer & Environmental Sciences (ACES)
Department: 303600-HOTEL RESTAURANT AND TOURISM MGT
Location: Las Cruces, New Mexico
While the faculty member will teach both in-person and online classes, they must be willing to relocate to Las Cruces.
Target Hourly/Salary Rate: Commensurate with qualifications
Appointment Full-time Equivalency: 1.0
FLSA Status: Exempt

Job Duties and Responsibilities: The position is 75% teaching, 20% research, 5% service. Success in this position requires excellence and expertise that strengthen the university's capacity to engage students, community members, and affiliated researchers on hospitality and tourism issues. It is envisioned that the faculty member will contribute to enhancing the School's national and international reputation for its undergraduate and graduate programs. Although no formal Extension duties are outlined in the position, outreach and service to stakeholders are an essential aspect of it. Excellence in teaching, both in-person and online formats is required, and includes advising of both undergraduate and graduate students, and assisting with department recruiting and retention efforts. The faculty member is required to perform research, publish and present in peer-reviewed formats, and to solicit financial support for research through grant and industry funding. Service to the profession and on university, college, and departmental committees is also expected. The faculty member will teach three courses per semester.

The School of HRTM is part of the College of Agricultural, Consumer and Environmental Sciences, which is home to seven other academic departments, five extension departments, approximately 150 faculty members and 1,800 students. The department offers an undergraduate degree in Hotel, Restaurant and Tourism Management, a graduate Master of Family and Consumer Sciences, HRTM concentration degree and a Graduate Certificate in Hotel, Restaurant and Tourism Management. All are also offered fully online through NMSU Online. HRTM also offers a variety of courses through NMSU On-Demand. For more information about the department, please visit https://hrtm.nmsu.edu/
